Standards-Based Assessment & Grading in Music

Is your school moving into a standards-based system, and you are looking for examples from a music classroom (rather than math or language arts)? Here is an opportunity to discuss the research and practical implementation of standards-based teaching and learning in a music classroom with an experienced music educator. Our work will include:

- Understanding the standards-based system relative to the music classroom
- Developing reporting standards in music
- Exploring the role and power of feedback and reflection in music
- Creating standards-based assessments of singing and playing instruments
- Creating standards-based assessments of knowledge such as rhythm or music vocabulary
- Recognizing the prominence of “participation” in ensemble classes and how reporting on that could look in a standards-based system
- Understanding how [instrumental] practice logs fit in
- Assigning grades from standards-based evidence
- Collaborative thinking with others who teach the same music classes you do
